Ralco Spreads A Cheap Field

Many Surprises Develop Despite Fast Track and Clear Weather at New Orleans

In Grunewald

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18 .- In a day of cheap racing for the customary Saturday crowd, surprises developed in number, not the least of which was the letory of Mrs. M. K. Day's American Hoy, which won the fourth event. American Boy paid the juley odds of to 1 to his supporters.

Another advertised feature, the runewald Handleap for all ages, fell o H. F. Brown's Ralco, a fwe-year-old orse that was all sorts of a disaposintment around the metropolitan racks this summer. He also paid to 1

Both American Boy and Ralco crowded quickly to the front after the break and aboved the way from start to finish. Ralco wen away off by himself as he pleased, but the backers of American Boy had many an anxious moment before the numbers were hung out. Little Bell, who had the leg up, cased his mount through the last sixteenth when he had the race sewed up, and Kirah, which came with a rush through the stretch, was only a neck and hiran, which came with a rush bugh the stretch, was only a neck at the end. The winner, which rated off the early pace, was much heat and could have won quite as ly as did Ralco.

Commercial Still Leads High School Chess Tilt

Seven additional team matches played among the fifty-six players representing the fourteen high schools in the teurnament of the Interborough High School Chess League at the Manhattan Chess Club yesterday brought no change in the standing of any of the schools.

Yankee Stadium Is Threatened With Dreadful Ordeal by Flood To Desert Rutgers

The great Yankee stadium, whose majestic proportions are so well splayed in this photo, made but a few days ago, is about to be desecrated | George Foster Sanford will coach again a most foul and impious performance. Nobly conceived by the Paying Colonels as the fitting battleground for our greatest sports, it is soon to be the stage of an unspeakable tragedy in which the finer feelings and tender memories of bygone days will be put to the rack and torture.

Shades of the immortal Ping Bodie, that such an outrage should be perpetrated within the confines of a ball park! In brief, and bluntly, the horrible crime not only contemplated but ing of ten thousand beer barrels in certain areas of the new concrete grandstands. Imagine the scene. Thousands of cheering spectators view the arrival of the kegs from the famous brewery of Colonel Jake. They are decorated with red ribbon and blue the second of the s Inc. 5:45.

The ostensible reason offered in explanation is that this will be an easy method for testing the bearing capacity of the new concrete grandstands. These structures must andergo a test of streas and strain, and must support at least 100 pounds to the square foot. But the explanation thus offered only proves the maliclous intentions of the engineering squad.

Edwin Americus Rommel owns the knuckles. Hundreds, in fact, thousands, before have possessed the same number of knuckles, but none has applied the lower extremities of the pitching hand with the same success. For Edwin Americus Rommel, by discovering and mastering a freak but legal knuckle ball shoot, not only won more games than any pitcher in the American Lengue during the 1922 season, but caused another stampede in the direction of Connie Mack and gained extra distinction during the past summer by rating next to George Sisler as the most valuable player.

Three knuckles on the right hand turned the trick. By gripping the ball with the lower knuckles of the first three fingers, balanced by the thumb and the last finger, Rommell created such a mystifying assortment of benders that rival American League owners are crowding the Athletics a fine score of $96 points out of a possible 1,200. for all Rutgers teams, especially football.

Hart, whose charts and statistical data have been an immense help to Head Coach George Foster Sanford, finds that Rutgers advanced the ball 1,696 yards in the 402 serimmage plays of the season, for an average of 4.21 yards a play.

Opponents gained 1,241 yards in 455 plays, for an average of 2.72 a play. Rutgers made 635 plays of all kinds and the opponents 685, for a total of an even 1,300 plays in the nine games played. The playing time of the season was 488 minutes, which means an average of 2.68 plays a minute.

Rutgers punted 2,108 yards, nearly a mile and a quarter, and kicked off 1,652 yards. Rutgers had a bad year for penalties, losing more than a quarter of a mile, or 568 yards, to the opponents' 323 yards.

John J. McGraw, regarded as baseball's Napoleon, discarded Ed Rommel as a pitching prospect. Finishing his first professional year in 1918 with the Newark club of the International League, Rommel was purchased by the Giants in an optional deal.

Before the 1919 series opened McGraw canceled the claim and Rommel remained with Newark.

Earl Mack, son of Connie Mack, managing Newark that season, confided to his dad that Rommel was the most promising kid in the circuit and Connie, on the recommendation of his son, bought Rommel. Rommel won 7 games and lost 7 for the Athletics in 1920. In 1921 he won 16 and lost 23, but as the Macks finished last, with 55 victories and 190 defeats, they did not have a pitcher who was above the 500 mark.

Rommel was born at Baltimore, Md., Oct. 13, 1897, stands 6 feet 2 inches and weighs 180 pounds.
